Android:
You can create a zip folder through github that contains all our coding and xml pages. All you need to do is to download android studio as well as the android SDKs that will be recommended while you are downloading. Unzip and open the project directly. Run project with the green arrow in Android Studio and create an emulator that it will run on or deploy it to an actual device.

We have encountered troubles ensuring build tools work for different configurations so if you have any trouble getting our project to build, run or even if you need help configuring Android Studio, please ask for help.
